Music teachers have their own favorite set of materials from which they love to teach. However, deeply rooted in every music teacher is the desire to seek out new songs, games, and materials to supplement them. Armed with puppets, rhythm sticks, children's literature, and other manipulatives, this year's clinician will lead participants through a selection of his favorite material, gathered and used throughout over twenty-five years of teaching. Not only will there be singing, dancing, and playing, but participants will be carefully led through the pedagogical steps that may be incorporated into their K-6 programs.
